Curlosity Rewarded.

An amusing instance of southern perseverance under difficulties recently came to our ears. A young lady from Louisiana had heard much of Mrs. Leslie Carter's beauty, and fearful that she would not see the new star in the south the enwhich adjoins the Berkeley Lycenm, where Mrs. Carter is rehearsing, and coaxed the latter to find out if there was any secret communication between the buildings. Curiosity found a way, but a very small one, and the girls crawled through it and obtained an entrance to the Berkeley while rehearing was on. Miss Entete (this isn't her real name) enjoyed the breaking in more than she did the rehearsal. She says Mrs. Carter is being coached by Belasco, even to the least inflection of her voice. The admirable points about her are her abundant blonde hair and her dressing. She were a neglige-one of those famous fitted her form like a mold. The two all the time. girls staid through about half an hour of "Did I say that right, Mr. Belasco?" and "Is that the way you want me to do it?" with which Mrs. Carter interlarded the dialogue of the play, and then crowded back to the Athletic reems and washed the dust from their hands.—New York sprung into the watch stem, not riveted, Cor. A THIEF'S CONFESSION.

MOLLIE MATCHES" TELLS HOW EAS-ILY POCKETS ARE PICKED.

Very Little Danger of Detection-Math ods of Getting Rid of the Plunder Thieves Never Take Cheap Jewelry. Some Clover Work Upon Friends.

I once knew a pickpocket who would, on occasion, unbosom himself as to his work. "I can," he said, "get a thousand pock-tbooks before I am detected once, and then the discovery will occur through the clumsiness of one of my 'stalls.' Yes, it would seem as though my business would pay, but you must recall the fact that most pocketbooks do not contain much money. We open them frequently and find no money at all—nothing but receipts and other papers. Those we call 'readers.' We strike so many "readers' that money made In pocketpicking is not so great as one "Of all men on earth a pickpocket has to possess nerve and have it with him. The man who 'takes' as a rule passes the stuff out of his hands as soon as he can. If a thief carries a 'het leather,' that is, some poketbook just taken, or that there is a row about, he deesn't put it in his pocket. He carries it under his vest, so that by simply drawing in his breath it will fall to the ground. He does this, of course, and lets the leather go in event of being taken. He will drop the wallet as he and the officer are walking along. In the dark its easy. Just drop the stuff and walk over it. Prewalked over hundreds in my time. Where detectives make a mistake is in not search ing men as soen as they grab 'em.

"Sometimes thieves get reckless, and will turn a trick for fun and just to demon strate how smart they are. I saw a man once in the seat ahead of me on the train who put his pocketbook in his hip pocket around yere since de wah yo' eber heard after he paid his fare. Just to show what tell of, an' de furder I keep away from a I could do I waited until he sat dozing in his seat. Then I began to push on the back of the car seat with one lines, and as fast as I raised the seat back I held it by wedging my other foot in between it and the bottom of the seat. I lay back and pretended to sleep all this time myself, and I worked so slowly and so steadily that my friend never awoke at all. When I had the back of the sent raised so high that I could make the trip I reached under and took the pocketbook. It took forty-five minutes terprising girl made friends with a to get this pocketbeck, and there wasn't habitue of the Ladies' Athletic club, anything in it then, but the people with me thought it was a great feat.

HOW A POCKET IS PICKED. "Thieves never take a silver watch. is not valuable enough. In getting watches the man who does the work stands still with his back to the part wanted. This sort of work will occur on race tracks and at any place where crowds are standing The 'stalls' get behind the victim, and commence crowding until one way and an other they get the gentleman square against the left shoulder of the pickpocket. On his left arm he carries a duster or shawl as a 'cover,' and when the victim is all placed the pickpocket goes through him with his right hand, reaching across himself to do the feat, covering his right arm and hand from sight with the duster on negliges - of shimmering blue which his left and looking stendily the other way

"The man who is rebbed never sees the face of the man who takes his watch at all, and this is a great point in case he makes a roer. As a rule I never take the chain. They are mostly plated, and there's nothing in them. It is easier and quicker to take the watch alone. The rings are only and as you take the watch you can twist the ring free from the watch and chain by an easy effort of the thumb and fore finger.
